[1] Another acceptable word order is to put the predicate adj first: צַדִּיק הַנָּבִיא…. Note: for this exercise, I'm providing both ways to attach the prep מִן so that you can get accustomed to seeing it both ways; however, since the way that uses assimilation is more difficult, going forward I will usually provide only that way when creating a word with the מִן attached.

[2] Another acceptable word order is to put the predicate adj first: יְשָׁרִים הַגִּבּוֹרִים וְרָשָׁע הַמֶּלֶךְ. This is true for many other sentences in section a: ##4, 5, 7, 9, 13, 14. I provide one more ex. for #13 below.

[3] Recall that when a SQNMLVY letter (and yod is one of them) has a DF inside and a VS underneath, it often loses the DF and the VS becomes SS. The two forms given here represent both possibilities. Compare also with #7 above.
